

I've been a subscriber to XM Radio almost since its inception. I find it an invaluable service as I'm on the road a significant amount of time and find it impossible to remember what stations provide what information and music as I drift in and out of their coverage areas. With XM I need only save the stations I normally listen to and I can access them from anywhere. I would find it a great disservice if their service offerings were hampered in any way. I should be able to get all of the same services from XM or any satellite competitor as I do from local radio stations. I would strongly oppose any legislation that would limit my availability to service provided by XM or Sirius.
